PRESTIGE CLASS

“GNASH YOUR SHIELDS AND STRAP ON THE IRON, LADS. WE’RE WAVEBOUND!”

Wise men know to fear the squared sails of the northmen’s fleet, for upon the decks of those shallow boats are ruthless raiders with looting mirrored in their eyes and murder panting in their hearts. The “sea devils” are the worst of these northmen, so named for their pitiless greed and the screaming fury that possesses them in a fight, allowing them to swoop down upon a settlement and ravage it as though they were not men, but demons sent from hell itself.

Despite their violent thievery and savagery in battle, sea devils are not evil nor are they inherently corrupt. Raiding is their livelihood as much as animal husbandry or farming is the trade of others. It does not occur to them that the communities they live upon consider their raiding immoral and foul, for it is the only life they know. It is a life granted them by the gods and they honor that gift through the glory of death, killing and plunder from the decks of their dragonships.

CAMPAIGN USE

Obviously, a sea devil is ideal for seaborne games, especially along frigid coastlines, but they will fit in just about any other game with a bit of imagination. A sea devil who finds himself out of place plundering warmer climates can be an interesting challenge, as can one who finds himself stranded ashore. Northmen feel out of place in southern cities as it is (or any city, for that matter), but how would a sea devil react to long months without the smell of salt water in his nostrils, the feel of the sea’s winds in his hair, or the rocking of a sturdy deck beneath his feet?

TM

At least one level each of barbarian and pirate are necessary to become a sea devil, after which the player should decide which class(es) will fulfill the prestige class’ remaining qualifications at the desired rate. Additional barbarian levels will meet the combat requirements faster, but a few more levels of pirate will certainly make the sea devil a better sailor.
